

WHYY's weekly performing arts series

Hello,

I am writing to you on behalf of Bryan Brussee.

Bryan is an extremely dynamic individual. He has been an asset to WHYY's On Canvas team since joining in the summer of 2014. His ability to work at a fast pace and independently has highly contributed to the success of our weekly music performance and interview program.

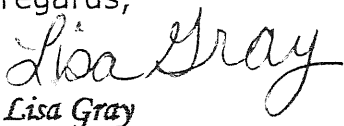

Bryan is the type of person who has the "can-do" attitude and is always willing to do whatever is necessary to complete the task at hand in a timely manner. He excels at performing the various tasks required to produce our weekly TV show; whether it is researching our artists, social media, developing song notes or assisting the production staff in many ways, his attitude and performance have been consistently outstanding. Bryan quickly became a dependable member of our crew.

For example, Bryan's organization and ability to work as a team earned him the opportunity to not only develop the interview questions for our artists, but also script out an entire show shortly after he began working with us. This is very rare that we would give such a challenge to an intern, especially in their first few weeks, but with Bryan's ability to communicate and ease in learning what was required, he successfully scripted out an episode which is slated for broadcast in our upcoming season on WHYY TV.

During the shoots, Bryan not only helped the crew with camera set up, but he shot photos for our Facebook page, and ran our promo table; direct public relations with the fans at the show.

I would strongly recommend for you to hire Bryan in whatever capacity. He will be an asset to your team as well. Not only is he bright, but he is an upstanding and lovely person.

Best regards,

Lisa Gray
